Copyright, Disclaimer, Linking Guidelines

Copyright

All materials on this Web site are copyright protected by the Appomattox Regional Library System, including but not limited to all design, HTML code, text, and images, unless otherwise expressly stated. All rights reserved.

Disclaimer

Although those who maintain the Appomattox Regional Library web site at www.arls.org, (www.arls.biz, www.arls.info, www.arls.net, www.arls.us) attempt to provide information that is complete, timely, accurate, and relevant to the Library's mission, they cannot provide guarantees. If you see something in a Appomattox Regional Library System Web site document that should be corrected or updated, please e-mail to the address on the document (or to askalibrarian@arls.org if the document is unsigned).

Hypertext links to other Web sites are for the convenience of users of the Appomattox Regional Library Web site and do not constitute any endorsement by the Appomattox Regional Library. These sites were initially visited before linking with them and are periodically checked. The Appomattox Regional Library System does not control their content, and that content may frequently change. If you find a link that is inactive or you have any questions or concerns about a link, please contact the address on the page with the link or askalibrarian@arls.org. Please be sure to identify the inactive link and the page on which it appears.

Linking Guidelines

The Appomattox Regional Library System actively encourages other sites to link to its pages, provided that any such link does not connote an endorsement by or affiliation with the Appomattox Regional Library System. Links must be text-only and accurately labeled. The link label (caption) and its context must accurately represent the content and source (the Appomattox Regional Library System) of the linked page(s).

In view of the dynamic nature of the Appomattox Regional Library System's Web site and the possibility of updates and changes to the Appomattox Regional Library System's pages, we prefer that links enter the Appomattox Regional Library System's site at the home page (<http://www.arls.org>).

The additional guidelines are to be followed by other sites linking to pages of the ARLS Web site:

1. Do not present Appomattox Regional Library System pages or content as your own. Do not incorporate any content from this site into your site (e.g., by in-lining or framing or in any other manner) or alter the appearance of the Appomattox Regional Library System pages.
2. Please contact askalibrarian@arls.org to advise us that you are linking to these pages. Also include the URL of your page that contains the link. The Appomattox Regional Library System reserves the right to revoke its consent to the link(s) at any time at its sole discretion.
3. If you want to republish in electronic or other form the major part of any textual content on Appomattox Regional Library System pages, please contact askalibrarian@arls.org to request a written release first; a republication fee may be charged. We require that a link to the Appomattox Regional Library System Web site be placed with any hypertext republication of major textual content from the Appomattox Regional Library System page(s).

4. In accord with existing copyright laws, excerpts from any textual content on Appomattox Regional Library System pages may be quoted freely, providing that full and proper attribution is given, including the Appomattox Regional Library System URL, which is <http://www.arls.org>.

5. A link may be created to the URL for an image on the Appomattox Regional Library System Web site but the image itself may not be downloaded into another hypertext document without written permission from the Appomattox Regional Library System. This restriction preserves the integrity of the image by ensuring that image files are served directly from the Appomattox Regional Library System's servers. For more information, please contact askalibrarian@arls.org.

6. If you wish to reproduce or use an image from the Appomattox Regional Library System's Web site for publication in electronic or any other form, you must obtain written permission from the Appomattox Regional Library System in advance; a reproduction fee will usually be charged. For more information, please contact askalibrarian@arls.org.
